5 Things to Never Buy New

Sometimes we think that everything our kids need must be brand new. That gets expensive—and it's just not so! Kids grow out of everything VERY fast, which means that when one child is done with something, the item still has tons of life left in it. You can save money AND help the planet by shopping JBF!

1

STROLLERS

Strollers are made to last. Families with multiple kids can need several strollers at different stages. Saving money on these high priced items is the smart way to go.

2

BOOKS

You're raising readers which means that you need a constant flow of books through your home. Buying used books at super low prices is the best way to be sure your kids always have the stories they need to develop their reading and imagination skills. (And you don't have to worry about losing library books!).

3

INFANT ESSENTIALS

Bottles, feeding items, bath tubs, home safety-proofing tools—these are all things you can easily sanitize, so there's no need to buy new.

4

TOYS

It's hard to predict how long your child will play with a toy, so buying toys brand new just doesn't make sense. What if they play with it for just one day? That's why I buy toys at the JBF sale—for much lower prices.

5

CLOTHES

Kids go through sizes really fast, so buying clothing that another child has outgrown is a super sustainable way to shop (and save!). SMART!
